Five tips on Choosing a Locale for your Destination Wedding

Once an exotic rarity, destination weddings are becoming more popular each year. Yet every couple deserves to have a memorable day in the perfect setting. So how can you narrow down your choices of exactly where you'll tie the knot?

"Many of our clients choose a destination based on its significance to them as a couple," says Tara Soloway, CEO of Luxe Destination Weddings, specialists in planning luxury destination weddings. "Maybe it's where he proposed, or the site of a memorable vacation together." On the flipside, some couples look for a destination neither have visited, but have always dreamed of seeing.

How many will be attending, and from where? The Riviera Maya just south of Cancun, for example, is very easily accessible from all over North America. Hawaii, another dream wedding destination, may be a little far if you have lots of family on the east coast. Will it be adults-only or a family affair? Some resorts don't allow kids on site even for a wedding, while others are so family-friendly you may find it hard to drag your ring bearer away from the playground!

Also, what will the guests want to do when they aren't attending wedding-related festivities? Do you have golfers? Spa aficionados? Folks who love a spin on the roulette wheel? A little list of your "must haves" and "nice to haves" will help your Luxe travel consultant narrow down your choice.

Timing is important as well. "Many couples consider Valentine's Day for their wedding," says Soloway, "But be careful. We're aware of resorts that will permit 20 or 30 weddings on that day, which can result in your 'special' day not feeling quite so special."

And now is the time to let your imagination soar. Close your eyes, and what is the setting you see? Maybe a tropical garden or wide expanse of beach on Vancouver Island? Mayan ruins or a white stucco chapel? These days, the possibilities are more and more exciting. Soloway (who opted for a beachfront Caribbean wedding herself) adds, "With a little time, creativity and thought, your wedding can really be a dream come true."

From "save the date" notelets to the services of their own on-site wedding coordinator, Luxe Destination Weddings can take care of every detail of a destination wedding.
